GERALD DOUCET
Secretary General, World Energy Council

Based in London, WEC is the only global, non-governmental, multi-energy, industry-focussed body active in over 95 countries. Previously, Gerald had a varied career in Canadian government service, industry organisations, and international relations as an economist, consultant, and diplomat. Before joining WEC he was President and CEO of the Canadian Gas Association.

WECs main goal today is to move towards responsible growth for all, encompassing economic development, environmental protection and the reduction of global inequalities. The decisions we make over the next three years will determine the global energy landscape for the next 30 years or so and for the generation that will follow us. WEC is a forum that can assemble all stakeholders around the table to elaborate these solutions.
